We must build this Paducah road and thus escape destruction by lateral countries of home some continuous con the summer sun. No law against having as many wives as they please. Make their women work out of doors and in doorses that the value and importance of the Paducah connection could hardly be exaggerated.

Col. Lacey spoke of an enthusiastic meeting in Trenton, a town which had only recently begun to trade with Memphis. The people there are very anxious to come to Memphis, and we must make an effort to give them facilities demanded.

Col. Mitchell was asked to state his views of the matter under discussion. He

The cemetery was alive WHEREAS, We are satisfied that it is the interest of the city of Memphis that its Mississippi River railroad should be completed without aid from any city north or northwest of Paducah, and WHEREAS, Ald to the extent of $100,000 wing to the excellent system of drainage trop the city, will, in our opinion, assure from the city, will, in our opinion, ascure this object, we, therefore, sak our city to make such subscription in ten years six per cent, bonds, to be issued one-half upon the completion of the road to Covington, the other half upon the completion of the completio for failed to comply with the exact the other half upon the completion of the people to order, and Judge Hudson was made chairman of the occasion. In terms prescribed, he was assured by these gentlemen that they would, if it were possible, make up from other sources, our deficiencies. St. Louis, within tweives months, will have a road to Little Rock, it was already controlling a road to Nashville, and the Mobile and Ohio road gave. St. Louis centrol of the country east and south of us. Thus we are hedged in on overy hand, and there was only one way of escape, and if we would give the eastern extended the Mississippi River road must be controlled by ourselves and not be suffered to become a mere feeder to St. Louis lines. But this was better than extended to lose the $300,000 of outstanding. Besides, the counties north of Memphis must have a railroad, and if the controlled in the subscription of $200,000 upon the terms above stated, the people to order, and Judge Hudson was made chairman of the occasion. In a few moments there were whole acres of people gathered around; and the great mortary, which was decorated with wreaths, soon bore its load of little African curticular and principal apeaker of the day was Judge Lewis.
